The purpose of the baseline study was to establish a geochemical snapshot of the area, as a datum for monitoring future change in the geochemical landscape, whether natural or human-induced. This report presents the methodology, analytical results, and sample descriptions for water, sediment, and heavy-mineral concentrate samples collected during this geochemical investigation. In the summer of 2000, the Clear Creek, Little Pistol, and Shellrock wildfires swept across much of the area that was sampled. Thus, these data represent a pre-fire baseline geochemical dataset. A 2001 post-fire study is planned and will involve re-sampling of the pre-fire baseline sites, to allow for pre- and post-fire comparison.
