Arrangements being in progress for the establishment of such a corps in this county, in consequence of a circular communication recently addressed by the Secretary of State for War to the Lords Lieutenant of counties, of which a copy is annexed, persons disposed to join the corps for Aberdeenshire are requested to communicate their names and addresses to the subscriber without delay. NEWELL BURNETT, Clerk of Lieutenancy. Record Office, King Street, Aberdeen, May, 1859. About the same time there also appeared the following quotation from a letter from Colonel Kinloch, who had so far back as 1852 strongly advocated the formation of rifle corps: --Aberdeen and the plunder of its granite palaces must be such a glorious prize to the admiral of a Russian or foreign fleet, that the sooner the youth of Bon-Accord take up arms for their defence the better. A rifle corps, with the most scientific members in it instructed in military practice, so as to manage great guns for the defence of the city and harbour, would be most suitable for the Granite City, and a manly and healthy occupation and recreation for the youth of this country. But the Aberdonians were quite alive to the importance of their city, and steps had already been taken to test local feeling on the subject. In the diary of Sheriff Watson, the learned and benevolent founder of the female industrial school in Aberdeen which for long bore his name, the...
