Excerpt: . and well adapted to a car of its size and power comprise the list: Electric lights, 12-inch bullet headlights. 6-inch bullet sidelights and a tail light; Warner autometer, Jiffy curtains, Bosch magneto, demountable rims, including one extra rim and a holder; rear view mirror, top, with cover, windshield der dimensions, thermo-syphon cooling and automatic constant level lubrication; its axle-mounted three-speed change gear, center lever control and left drive. The new type Bosch magneto specified( for 1913 equipment is novel in that, by a special design of the pole shoes, sparks of equal intensity may be obtained with two different adjustments of the timing. It is. therefore, strictly a two-speed magneto, one position of the timing lever being employed for starting only, while the other is the regular running position. Another unusual detail is the tilting of the rear, full-elliptic springs. This brings the...
